

IS IKE WORTH THE DENVER STRANGLER

A DENVER PAPER THINKS HE IS THE MARKET STREET STRANGLER OF THAT CITY.

(From Monday's Daily Citizen.)

An Associated Press dispatch from Albuquerque states that Ike Worth, a negro, was yesterday convicted of the murder by strangulation of Hattie Wilson, a white woman of the half world, who formerly lived in Denver.

The dispatch stated the Denver police department is investigating and disclosing a sensational nature that may throw light on the mysterious strangulations which took place in Denver's red-light district a decade ago and are expected within a few days.

The Wilson woman formerly lived in the crib at 2014 Market street, and after the negro was residents of the quarter during the winter of 1924-1925, when three women were murdered.

The crimes which terrorized the Market street district occurred in January, 1925. The first victim was a young woman, who was found dead with a cord tightly drawn around her throat. In quick succession followed the murders of Marie Cantanero, a French woman, and Koko Oyama, a Japanese, both victims of the mysterious strangulations.

The crimes were laid to the French negroes and a roundup of the same was made by the police. Suspicion fixed on Richard Kennedy and he was tried in the criminal court. The trial occupied the attention of the community for several months, but evidence was lacking to fix guilt on the suspect and the jury finally acquitted him.

The police made a number of attempts to run down the stranglers, but they were without result, and the murders passed into the unexplained mysteries of police records.

Now comes the possible solution of the brutal crimes. Investigation by the local police seem to fix a guilty knowledge of the murders on a negro Worth. It is known that he and the woman lived in the district about the time of the crimes and for several years afterward. The police believe they have already established connection of the pair with the mysterious victims, and the old theories are already giving way to the belief that both the woman and her murderer were implicated, if not the actual perpetrators.

The following facts have been gathered. The wife occupied by the Wilson woman occupied the habitation of Lema Tupper and was close to the wife of the other unfortunate woman. Worth was the consort of the Wilson woman and lived in comparative affluence off her earnings. Robbery is supposed to have been the motive for the murders, and this is strengthened by the fact that both Worth and the woman seemed to have an unusual supply of money about that time. It is known that both left the house at the same time, and inquiries are being sent to police departments of western cities in an effort to trace their movements. It is possible that a detective will be sent to Albuquerque to interview Wilson and secure a confession from him.

The above from the Denver Times, while nice reading for the sensational point of view, is quite full of inaccuracies. In the first place the woman's name—the woman killed on North Third street in this city—was not Hattie Wilson, but the police records show her name to be Hattie White.

Another thing is that there is nothing to show that Ike Worth ever lived with Hattie White in Denver. Chief of Police McMillin said this morning that he believed that the Worths and Hattie White became acquainted here, while the latter was a resident of the North Third street district. Hattie White spent the greater part of the past ten years in this city. During her several absences the records also show that she lived at Silver City and at Window, Arizona. The Denver story is without foundation.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is Pleasant to Take.

The finest quality of granulated sugar is used in the manufacture of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the roots used in its preparation give it a flavor similar to maple syrup, making it quite pleasant to take. Mr. W. L. Roderick, of Poudreville, Md., in speaking of this remedy, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with my children for several years and can truthfully say it is the best preparation of the kind I know of." The children like to take it and it has no injurious after effect. For sale by all druggists.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

(From Tuesday's Daily Citizen.) William French, a young man twenty-eight years of age, from Greenfield, Mass., died in his home on South Second street Sunday night. French came to this city about a week ago in hopes that the New Mexico climate would help build him up, but through over exertion brought on a hemorrhage of the lungs, which caused his death. He carried a letter of introduction to F. G. Pratt, but had only called once and at the time Mr.

Pratt did not think his condition serious. The remains will be shipped to Greenfield tonight by G. W. Strong's Sons.

A Navajo Indian girl, attending school at the local government Indian school, died at the school this afternoon after a long sickness, with pneumonia and dropsy. Her name was Ila Pasha, and she came to the school from Thureau. She was about 14 years old. Funeral services will be held at the school tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Patry King, who died a few days since at the county jail of acute brain disease, was buried this afternoon by Undertaker Benters.

ANOTHER TIGHT SUNDAY FOR EL PASO, IT WAS

ALL PLACES OF BUSINESS SPEND SUNDAY CLOSED TIGHTLY, AND THERE IS BUT LITTLE COMPLAINT.

El Paso Herald.

For a second time the laws of the state of Texas hold good Sunday in El Paso. So far as appearance went, every business in the city was closed, and merchants and shopkeepers continued with the shuttered doors.

Following with a quiet Sabbath in El Paso, came a day of festivities for the people of the United States. The river swarmed into boats, and the city was a scene of the most beautiful work. The sidewalks were filled with overflowing and rapid passage on the sidewalks was impossible.

Curiously was manifested among El Paso people in general to know how strictly the school keepers and other business men who customarily do a big Sunday business were observing the law. The general belief was that the fear of Sheriff Boone and his deputies, who had been instructed to be observant of any violations of the law, would be a sufficient obstacle in the way of any who otherwise would risk acting contrary to the law. Several there were who held that those in the inner circle did not go dry.

In nearly every saloon Saturday morning were given to customers that Sunday would be dry and that bottled goods for pocket use were available for those who desired them. One hotel had placed in its lobby a foot high on a canvas large enough to cover the mirror behind the bar an inscription declaring that no liquor would be sold.

No street sprinkling was done Sunday, but instead the street sprinklers made a final round late Saturday evening.

Although Sheriff Boone's desire is not to make a state arrest for violation of the law, he has declared that from here on the law is to be in effect in the future. Any infringement upon the provisions of the statute will be taken by the sheriff's department, by the person violating the law.

Witness of the motion picture show the sheriff for law enforcement against gambling feel that they are in special danger in case they violate any of the "dead letter" laws. It is understood that there are no longer any "dead letter" laws, and that Sheriff Boone is said to have remarked with a twinkle in his eye that it's a poor rule that won't work both ways. This is taken to mean that all statute laws apply as well to "reformers" as to men who make a living by breaking the laws.

"That's all right, too," said a politician. "If any one thinks we're going to crawl back as soon as the sheriff comes out with this all-inclusive warning of his, he is mightily mistaken. It took away our breath at the start, but there are precious few of us who are not willing to see the law carried out. Maybe there are some laws on the statute books that are back numbers or impracticable. There is no surer way of getting them off the books than to enforce them for a time. For myself, I think the sheriff is doing a first-class thing in coming out for an all-around enforcement of the law, and I hope he'll keep it up."

There was not as much complaint yesterday on the enforcement of the Sunday law as there was a week ago, and there was precious little then.

The business men were generally satisfied to have a day of rest and even the druggists are anxious to close. Said one of them last evening: "Yes, we are allowed to keep open on Sunday for the sale of drugs, but nothing else, and as we have very few prescriptions to fill during the day, the morning and perhaps an hour in the evening would be enough for us to remain open. If Sheriff Boone continues to enforce the Sunday law I am going to see if the other drug stores will not agree to closing Sunday afternoon. I believe we would all be better off with some rest on Sunday."

During the past eighteen months

the company has acquired acres of valuable oil land in California. On this land there are now located many producing wells. The oil now produced from this land is more than sufficient to supply locomotives on the coast line. What is the company to do with the rest of it? Some of the oil is now being sold, but will this policy be continued? These questions have started the rumor to the effect that the Santa Fe will gradually convert all of its locomotives into oil burners.

This rumor is backed by the fact that there are at all times locomotives in the Topeka shops which are being converted into oil burners. At the present time there are three. The work on all of these is being rushed in obedience with orders received from officials.

It is said that the Santa Fe is more than satisfied with the showing made by the oil burners now in use on the coast line. It costs less to operate them and the service given is every bit as good as that given the coal burning engines.

Three Parties of Surveyors.

G. W. Wakefield of Albuquerque came to Artes Wednesday night, overland. He says there are three parties of surveyors in the field this side of Pueblo. There are two lines of stakes running parallel and both parties are working like beavers. One of the parties is this side of Tropic. Simpson's. Another north making for the crossing leading for Farmington. He understands another crew is heading for the west of the mountain and will run direct to La Plata. In such haste was the Campbell corps, they left a wagon load of stakes this side of Simpson's. —Artes Index.

FARMINGTON.

The money has been disposed of a thousand dollars worth of goods at satisfactory prices, and the goods will be shipped as soon as they can be loaded.

J. R. Pond has taken the initiative to have some Thanksgiving races and is pushing the matter to success. While the time is rather short, yet some good local races can be had.

Dick Adams, the well-known race horse man, came in with his running horse from Albuquerque. Mr. Wakefield, who owns property above Artes, brought him across the desert. Mr. Adams will remain for the Thanksgiving races.

H. Pratt and A. W. Mallard, both of Aspen, Colorado, and J. E. Woods of Silverton, were in town looking after accounts. They are very much pleased with our country, but think land prices rather high. This is often the case, but when one thinks what can be done in the way of fruit and vegetables here it will be readily seen that they are not too high, but will soon be much higher.

H. E. Myers and J. A. Harwood have taken the contract to dig the well at the Indian school that is to furnish water for its system of water works. The well will be 10 feet in diameter and furnish 25,000 gallons in ten hours. This water has been tested by the government chemists, and the department is satisfied with the quality of the water. As soon as the well is completed contracts will be let for more buildings.

DEMING.

From two to three and a half miles west of Deming the laymakers have been busy for the past three or four weeks. It is estimated that about 200 men have been cut up to date, and the work still goes on. Cattle would have starved on the same ground before the rain.

Dr. Charles McMillan, for nearly three years a resident and practicing physician of Deming, died last Tuesday morning, while en route from Heber, in the western part of Socorro county, to Magdalena. He was evidently on his way home, and was traveling overland to the nearest railroad station, distant from Heber about 25 miles.

Last Friday the teachers of Deming public schools presented Dr. Francis Duff, county superintendent-elect of Luna county for the next two years, with a beautiful vase for flowers and two enormous bouquets. The vase is one of the handsomest articles of art ever seen in this part of the country, but the kindly sentiment of the teachers, as expressed through the gift, was of far more value to our superintendent than the gift itself.

DO NOT SPIT ON THE SIDEWALK

City Marshal McMillin last night was instructed to strictly enforce the spitting ordinance of this city, and he was also instructed to have placards printed, which he will post up conspicuously throughout the principal streets.

"I am determined," said Marshal McMillin, "to see that the ordinance is strictly enforced in the future, and have instructed the force to watch and arrest any person, foreign or otherwise, who is guilty of expectorating on the sidewalks. No fa-or-fines are on my list, and all will be arrested caught violating the municipal law."

"I am also determined to keep the sidewalks on the south side of Railroad avenue, between Second and First streets, in passable condition, not only for men, but for ladies, and the passengers who block this particular sidewalk, are hereby warned to keep this public thoroughfare free from human obstructions."

It is evident from these conclusions that a wave of reform and decency has struck the city, and that those who still insist on looking upon Albuquerque as a frontier town will wake up some fine morning and find themselves in the streets of the law.
